Fidelity® SMG Challenge

Offered at No Cost for 8th Graders*

The spring 2010 session of the Stock Market Game (SMG) is being offered at no cost to North Carolina 8th grade teachers and students* courtesy of Fidelity Investments®. The NCCEE is proud to partner with Fidelity Investments in offering 8th grade teachers the opportunity to assist their efforts in fulfilling the state standards for math, business and technology. The SMG is an online, interactive stock market simulation with a complete online curriculum that teaches the importance of saving and investing. While students learn about our market economy, they are also practicing and strengthening 21st century skills. To learn more about the SMG and free workshops and webinars for teachers new to the program, visit www.nccee.org or call 866.606.2233. Register now at www.stockmarketgame.org for the spring 2010 session.

“The SMG is a challenging and exciting teaching tool that can easily be integrated in any subject. It is an exciting way for students to learn skills needed for life and to prepare students for a global economy. They use critical thinking, problem solving, research, reading, team-building and many other skills that also help them in other classes. My students look forward to coming to class and it is amazing to hear them discuss the stock market. I have experienced a change in attitude about learning in many of my students because they are engaged in the learning process. Our school is a high poverty school with many special needs students; they become motivated right away because they want their team to win.” - Mary Cuthbertson, 8th Grade Teacher McClintock Middle School, Charlotte

The program will be at no cost to the first 675 8th grade teams registered for the spring session. You must mention this flyer in the comments section when registering your teams.
